Purpose

The 'Comprehensive Relationships and Sexuality (Puberty) Education for Primary Schools Toolkit' has been developed to assist schools in navigating the complexity of teaching relationships and sexuality (including puberty) education, that is correct, age- and stage-appropriate, and delivered in a safe and non- judgmental manner.

This Toolkit focuses on specific information for schools, principals, teachers, parents and carers. Other key information included is a checklist to support and implement comprehensive relationships and sexuality (including puberty) education in your school, as well as referral pathways into local support services.

Introduction

Sexuality education means different things to different people, but there is one thing all the experts agree on, it's not just about biology and sex. Therefore, it is referred to as Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education.

Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education includes feelings a person may have about their body, growing up, identity, sexual feelings and expression, gender, making babies, love and closeness, personal values and relationships. Essentially, it's about caring for (and enjoying) yourself, your body and others.

The primary goals of Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education are to equip young people with knowledge, skills, attitudes, and values that will empower them to:

- Promote their own health, wellbeing, safety and dignity
- Respecting the rights and safety of others
- Develop respectful social and sexual relationships
- Consider how their choices affect their own wellbeing and that of others
- Understand and ensure the protection of their rights throughout their lives

Sexual Health Victoria and Department of Education.

It will also include information about how people's bodies, identity, sexuality and relationships with others are different and diverse. This is so EVERY BODY in the room can, and is, included. It is a school's responsibility to ensure that all types of diversity are supported within the school and classroom setting.

There are three key aspects of being human, which informs how educators teach about bodies, body changes and growing up, body safety, identity, belonging and relationships:

- Sex – the physical body, the inside and outside reproductive body parts
- Gender – how a person feels about themselves, what they think about themselves, what they know about themselves, how they present/express themselves to the world
- Sexuality – how they feel about other people, including attraction and crushes

For Relationships and Sexuality Education to be comprehensive and most effective, it requires a whole-of-school approach – from Foundation to Year 12, and includes school staff, parents and carers. The approach promotes and models positive relationships, by embedding a culture of respect and gender equality across the school community. The provision of age- and stage-appropriate classroom learnings are further supported by policy(s), procedures and practices; pastoral care; and partnerships with the community and local services. Department of Education.

Embracing a whole-of-school approach to comprehensive positive relationships (including consent) and sexuality (including puberty) education ensures:

- recognition by all stakeholders of the value and importance of Relationship and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education
- commitment from the school community to a shared vision, which is reflected in school policies, practices, procedures, the physical environment and the school culture
- effective responses to critical incidents
- an understanding of the partnership between the student, the home, the school, and the community – it takes a village to raise a young person
- strengthening family engagement
- strengthening community partnerships and referral pathways into local services, such as Ballarat Community Health.

Health Promoting Schools Framework

Imagine a school where the students learn better and are more engaged and active during school hours. Healthy people perform better, regardless of their age.

The Health Promoting Schools Framework can help create a positive learning and working environment where both staff and students have better outcomes.

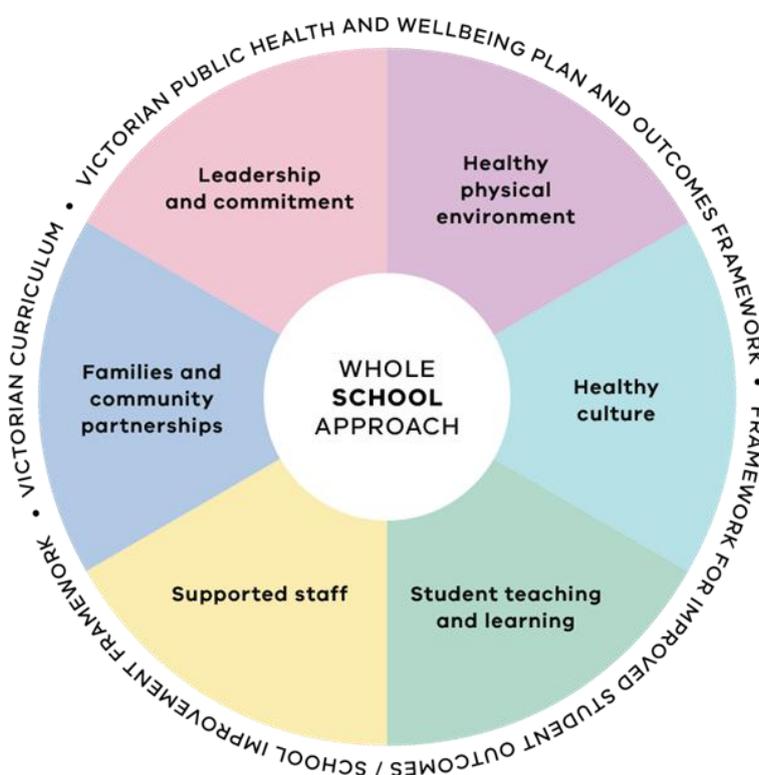

The Framework is based on the World Health Organization's Health Promoting Schools Model and reflects the Victorian Government's ongoing commitment to improving the health and wellbeing of children and young people.

The Framework provides a whole-of-school approach to health and wellbeing, supporting short- and long-term health outcomes by making healthy changes to the school's physical environment, policies and practices. This approach to health and wellbeing is recommended by the Department of Education as best-practice.

The whole-of-school approach strengthens the relationship between health and education by linking the Victorian Public Health and Wellbeing Plan with FISO 2.0 (Framework for Student Outcomes 2.0) and the Victorian curriculum.

The Framework aligns with a school's strategic planning and annual implementation plans and further strengthens family engagement and community partnerships with local services, including Ballarat Community Health.

The Framework is centred around eight key health areas, which include:

Wellbeing

Safety

Food Environment

Vaping, Alcohol & Other Drugs

Movement

Relationships

Sun Protection

Climate & Health

Each health area has a set of targets to achieve, resulting in healthy changes to a school's physical environment, policies and practices, health promoting activities and referral pathways.

Through participation in the Health Promoting Schools Framework, a school will become recognised as a 'Healthy School' with health and wellbeing successfully embedded into everyday school life.

Leadership and Commitment

For School Principals

In Victoria, the teaching of relationships (including affirmative consent) and sexuality (including puberty) education in all government and Catholic schools in an age-and stage-appropriate way, is mandated from Foundation to Year 12.

Relationships and sexuality education are part of the Victorian Curriculum, within The Personal and Social Capabilities and the Health and Physical Education curriculum.

Comprehensive relationships and sexuality education is most effective when it has a whole-of-school learning approach and is underpinned by a strong research evidence base.

Schools are not required to seek parental permission for the inclusion of relationships, consent, sexuality or puberty education.

However, a parent or carer may decide not to allow their child to participate.

For more information, please visit Department of Education – Sexuality and Consent Education.

Examples of other policy requirements

Inclusive Uniform Policy

An inclusive School Uniform Policy considers areas such as:

- Summer/Winter uniform rather than gendered uniform
- Mandatory wearing of dresses and skirts
- Haircuts

Menstrual Hygiene Management

Menstrual hygiene is a basic need and right for all students who menstruate. It is an important part of reproductive health. Having periods is a normal and healthy part of growing up, however taboos about menstruation mean that managing periods is often not talked about. Having a supply of period products available in school bathrooms can help normalise menstruation. Having open discussions about the safest way to use period products can help to build positive social norms and help menstruating students manage their menstrual hygiene with dignity. Department of Education.

Schools should ensure that all menstruating students, including those with disability or those who identify as trans or gender diverse, have access to free period products. For trans and gender diverse students, access arrangements should be outlined in their student support plan – gender affirmation. For advice and information on supporting LGBTIQ+ students, you can get in touch with the Safe Schools Unit at Department of Education. For students with disability, schools may seek to understand a student's personal care requirements related to menstrual management. Department of Education.

Free Period Products in all Government Schools Initiative

Free period products are available in all Victorian government schools. With the provision of period products, schools must provide students with information about the safe use of these.

Essity Australasia is the Department of Education Victoria's supplier of period products and dispensers. Schools may request replenishment of their period product dispensers outside their usual schedule, additional dispensers, replacement of dispensers, and other services by filling out this online form.

Healthy Relationships Policy Example (for non-Victorian Government schools)

Purpose

Leadership and staff acknowledge the importance of a safe and inclusive environment, which supports the sexual health and wellbeing (including puberty) and healthy relationships of all staff and students. This policy confirms our commitment to:

- providing a safe, inclusive and empowering environment for students, families, staff and visitors
- developing knowledge, resilience and help-seeking skills of students
- delivering sexuality education in one or more learning key areas of the curriculum as a part of a whole school approach to health and wellbeing.

As a health promoting school, we will promote respectful relationships and the health and wellbeing of students, staff and families through learning, policies, creating a safe and healthy physical and social environment, and developing community links and partnerships.

Policy statement

Background

Comprehensive, whole-school sexuality education that provides consistent and accurate information to children and young people from an early age, is respectful of diversity and supported by a whole-school approach can contribute to positive behaviour change.¹

The goal of sexuality education is to build on knowledge, skills, and behaviours, thus enabling young people to make responsible and safe choices. Developing protective factors such as resilience and social and emotional competencies will enhance the potential for children and young people to resist risky behaviours. Young people can make good decisions about their sexual health if education policies, programs and services are available to help them.

The promotion of sexual health is a responsibility shared between schools, the local health and welfare community, and parents. School-based sexuality education programs are more effective when they are developed in consultation with parents and the local community. Learning and teaching in sexuality education should be developmentally appropriate.²

Child Safe Standards

The 11 Child Safe Standards include requirements to keep children, young people and students safe, including:

- involvement of families and students in child safety
- schools' focus on safety for Aboriginal students
- better management of child abuse risks in online environments
- governance, systems and processes for keeping students safe.

Schools can continue to build on their existing child safety strategies, policies and practices to strengthen their culture of child safety and protect children and young people from abuse.

Comprehensive Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education fits well under all of the Child Safe Standards; however, it is most relevant under Child Safe Standards 3 and 5, respectively.

Standard 3: Child and student empowerment – Children and young people are empowered about their rights, participate in decisions affecting them and are taken seriously.

- Healthy and respectful friendships and relationships (including sexuality)
- Resilience
- Child abuse awareness and prevention – including consent and protective behaviours
- This is most often covered in the 4 R's Resilience, Rights and Respectful Relationships curriculum.

Standard 5: Diversity and equity – Equity is upheld and diverse needs are respected in policy and practice. Respect diversity and the inclusivity of:

- students with disability
- students from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
- students who are unable to live at home
- international students
- lesbian, gay, bisexual, trans and gender diverse, intersex and queer (LGBTIQ+) students
- Aboriginal students and provides and promotes a culturally safe environment for them.

Department of Education.

Healthy Physical Environment

A Healthy School Physical Environment is inclusive and reflects the diversity of the whole school community.

This includes the school buildings, grounds and facilities.

An inclusive physical environment can include visual displays, signage and materials displayed around the school, including in reception and school entrance areas, wellbeing area, classrooms and bathrooms to promote a strong, consistent message to the school community in support of comprehensive positive relationships and consent education.

This may include, but not limited to:

- School values

Healthy Culture

For Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education to be comprehensive and to be most effective requires taking a whole-of-school approach – from Foundation to Year 12, and school staff and parents/carers, that reinforces teaching through a healthy school culture. Sexual Health Victoria and Department of Education.

A Healthy School Culture is enriched by consistently using inclusive language. This is particularly evident during comprehensive positive relationships and consent education and so important for educators in schools, because when talking about people, bodies, relationships and/or families we need to ensure that every person in the room can be part of the conversation.

Some examples of this may include:

- When discussing bodies, people often separate them into two categories - male and female. People who are intersex, transgender or non-binary may not fit exactly into either of these categories. Because of this, where possible, the word 'typically' is used when referring to specific sexes or genders.
- "Common for most people and most bodies"
- Instead of saying "you have a vagina you look like a girl, here is the worksheet/ activity for girls" You could say "Choose a body that looks most like yours for your worksheet/activity" and let the child/young person choose.
- "Someone with a penis could grow up to become a man. That's their body parts, but maybe how they feel about their bodies could change, or it could not".
- "We're going to talk about what is typical for girls and women. Not every woman has a period, and some transgender men live with regular periods. Intersex bodies are different, too. So this information might not be relevant for all. If a person is born with a uterus, it's most likely they will start their cycle of bleeding around once a month. And this is a sign that their body can grow a baby."

We're not asking the child or young person to question how they feel about their body. What we are teaching is this is your body, what's its function, why is it private, who are the people you can go to for help. Sexual Health Victoria.

Other examples of inclusive language when discussing body changes and growing up, can include:

- young person/people
- a person/someone who has a penis
- a person/someone who has a vagina/vulva
- partner
- crushes and/or 'special feeling of attraction towards another person'
- conception and pregnancy, to also include In Vitro Fertilisation (IVF), donors, surrogates, adoption, and foster care.

Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education can also be underpinned by schools' values – for example Respect, Responsibility, Relationships, Resilience, Safety, Integrity, Teamwork, etc.

Although it is the school's responsibility to teach a comprehensive curriculum, it is a shared responsibility between the student, their parents and carers, the school and community organisations, such as Ballarat Community Health.

Families and carers should also be encouraged to continue Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education at home, to include family values, morals, traditions, and customs.

- a person living in a foster or adoptive home might feel excluded if we always refer to the adults at home as their birth parents (ie mum or dad).
- an intersex person might feel excluded if we only talk about bodies as being only male or female.
- a same-sex attracted person might feel excluded if we only talk about relationships as heterosexual, or that the only type of sex is the type that makes a baby.

It is imperative that educators are careful about their language, and consistently use intentional and inclusive language to make sure that everyone is part of the conversation.

For more information about Inclusive Language you can listen to Episode #22 of the 'Doing It' podcast from Sexual Health Victoria titled 'Inclusive Language'.

Student Teaching and Learning

Evidenced Based Positive Relationships and Consent Education

BCH utilises and recommends resources and activities developed and provided by a range of organisations and services, including (but not limited to), Sexual Health Victoria; Department of Education Catching On* and Resilience, Rights and Respectful Relationships curriculums; the eSafety Commissioner, plus more.

*Please note: Some of the content and resources Developed by Department of Education only available to users with EduPass (@education email address). If don't have an EduPass, please contact the BCH Health Promoting Schools Team and we will email you the learning and teaching resources directly.

Topics include: Protective Behaviours; Body Safety; Consent; Sexual and Reproductive Anatomy; Public and Private; Emotions; Friendships; Relationships; Reproduction; Puberty; Diversity; Sexual content online; eSafety; and Accessing Health Services.

BCH recommends introducing a Question Box at the beginning of the year or at least a few weeks before commencing explicitly teaching relationships and sexuality education. The question box will allow:

- students to ask questions anonymously, throughout the day, not only during puberty classes, as well as throughout the year.
- educators to tailor their lesson plans around what is current and relevant for students at the time.
- educators to check the Question Box at the end of the day/week (without students present) to allow for some time to think about how best to answer the question, or if you're not sure do some research into the topic and/or reach out to the BCH Health Promoting Schools Team! We are more than happy to assist with tricky questions.

Comprehensive Relationships (including Consent) and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education

You do not need to complete every activity under each of the topics. Some topics you may feel more comfortable to have a class discussion, reading books, watching videos, or use any other resource you have available that you feel would be most appropriate for your class and most importantly, you feel confident teaching. Just ensure what you are using is evidence-based and up to date.

Sexual Health Victoria has developed an extensive range of tools, resources and activities to help you plan and teach the curriculum and engage with families and carers.

- Scope and sequence chart – aligns the Sexual Health Victoria Relationships and Sexuality Education curriculum topics and resources with the Victorian curriculum.
- Parents' and carers' information letter - the purpose of this parent/carer letter is to outline the school's guidelines and approach to Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education, summarise the content to be taught and inform parents and carers of when the program will be delivered. This tool/letter can be edited to suit your needs. This is NOT a 'permission form', it is an opportunity to communicate content of the sessions. Some families may choose to opt out of the program, and that is okay.
- Consent Education Guidance - this guidance from the Department of Education explains consent and outlines how to use existing teaching resources to teach consent in an age-appropriate way, including Respectful Relationships and Catching On teaching and learning materials.

For further support, or to answer questions, queries or concerns we actively encourage any school staff and/or parents and carers to reach out and get in touch with our BCH Health Promoting Schools Team!

Please note

This guide is intended to support Victorian teachers in quickly identifying appropriate relationships and sexuality (including puberty) teaching resources and activities.

Some resources are readily available using the Catching On, the Resilience, Rights and Respectful Relationships learning materials, or other resource published by Victorian Department of Education. Some resources and activities are from reputable Australian and International sources and have been organised under the Victorian Curriculum 2.0 Content Descriptions with which they are aligned.

Some of these resources have been developed to align directly with the Victorian Curriculum, while others have been identified as appropriate matches by University of Melbourne's Centre of Excellence in Rural Sexual Health (CERSH) Team and the Ballarat Community Health (BCH) Healthy Communities Team.

The purpose of this guide is to provide educators with streamlined support to tailor programs and lesson plans to the diverse needs of students and classrooms.

Please note: Some content descriptions and elaborations do not have teaching resources linked, as this is not an exhaustive list and is a live working document. If you know of any great activities or resources please email the BCH Health Promoting Schools Team and it can be included and shared with other educators.

The below content descriptions under the 2 Strands of Personal, Social and Community Health – Health Education and Physical Activity – Physical Activity, and sub-headings with elaborations featuring the RS tag.

Foundation

The Foundation level teaches students to identify and practice respectful relationships, understand body autonomy and to identify strategies that they can use to report inappropriate touch, to seek help from others, and to take actions that help to keep them safe and healthy. Department of Education.

When discussing menstruation and periods, it is a great opportunity to show students the different types of products and explain how they are used to manage and absorb bleeding. These products include pads, tampons, a menstrual cup or period underwear. Each come in different shapes and sizes, but ALL need to be changed every 4-6 hours to stop leakage and in some cases prevent infection.

Schools can encourage students to have conversations at home with families/carers about periods and to create a 'period pack' that includes menstrual products to help the child/young person feel prepared and help to relieve some worries about getting their first period.

Additionally, free period products are available in all Victorian government schools and are provided by Essity Australasia.

Tips for lesson planning

Hygiene

SHV – Doing It Podcast: Episode 3: Taking care of your body

It is recommended to start the discussion off with introducing puberty in general.

- SHV Puberty Taboo Words Activity or just name body parts and identify other words they may know and have a laugh (great icebreaker), then clarify at the end that we will use the correct body part names.
- Reproductive Body Parts Activity
- Puberty Statements – when you get to the hygiene cards – can use this to talk about hygiene.
- Common concerns about the changing body (there is also a hygiene card in this activity).

You may want to do an explicit hygiene activity (as per Catching on Early and/or SHV Hygiene Activity from the SHV Children and Young People with Cognitive Disability resource – please email the Health Promoting Schools team to be sent these resources directly) or use it as a discussion points in the other activities.

Don't feel that you have to do every activity, and/or every scenario card in each activity, you may want to do them all or just pick a few that are suitable.

Consent

Resilience, Rights and Respectful Relationships – Years 5 and 6 Curriculum.

Topic 8: Positive Gender Relations - Activity 4: What is consent? Is this consenting? – page 142.

This activity could also be followed up with the Sexual Health Victoria activity 'Forgive or Forget' and/or 'Intimacy Scale' which can also be used to discuss consent about when it is needed and when it's not. The discussion will be more up to the teacher's comfortability and knowledge of consent.

Thirdly, there is also a Creating Consent Culture resource developed by Body Safety Australia and eSafety Commissioner. It has been created to compliment a documentary on SBS 'Asking for it'.

While each episode of Asking For It is rated M, the content for each section can be implemented without viewing the series.

There has been activities and resources designed and developed for schools that are age- and stage- appropriate, including some for Years 5 and 6 students.

Identity – Self, Gender and Sexual Diversity

Identity Discussion

- Identifying what makes you, you
- What you look like, things you like – like food, things to do, who you're friends and family are
- Understanding own values and beliefs – with activities about behaviours that are right or wrong, statements agree or disagree with

Gender stereotypes

- Who does what housework at home, what kind of jobs people have, boys are tough, girls are pretty
- Understanding diversity and all people are different and unique
- What it means to mean male and what it means to be female

Gender identity

- Brain – how we think
- Heart – how we feel
- Orientation - Who we are – represented by our heart (ie hetero, gay or bi)
- Sex – body parts you on the outside, as well as some body parts on the inside
- Sex assigned at birth – What the doctor says you are when you are born, based on what genitals they can see
- Cis-Gender – our brain and our body parts match
- Transgender - our brain doesn't match the body parts we see
 - Know in our head we are a girl, but we have a penis
 - Who we are doesn't match who you know you are
- Understanding differences and respect differences
- May not identify themselves, but be able to understand that another young person may be feeling this way.

Definitions:

- Gender Identity: One's internal sense of being male, female, neither of these, both, or another gender(s). Everyone has a gender identity, including you. For transgender people, their sex assigned at birth and their own internal sense of gender identity are not the same. Female, woman, and girl and male, man, and boy are also not necessarily linked to each other but are just six common gender identities.
- Gender Expression/Presentation: The physical manifestation of one's gender identity through clothing, hairstyle, voice, body shape, etc. Many transgender people seek to make their gender expression (how they look) match their gender identity (who they are), rather than their sex assigned at birth.
- Sex Assigned at Birth: The assignment and classification of people as male, female, intersex, or another sex based on a combination of anatomy, hormones, chromosomes. It is important we don't simply use "sex" because of the vagueness of the definition of sex and its place in transphobia. Chromosomes are frequently used to determine sex from prenatal karyotyping (although not as often as genitalia). Chromosomes do not always determine genitalia, sex, or gender.
- Physically Attracted To: Sexual orientation. It is important to note that sexual and romantic/emotional attraction can be from a variety of factors including but not limited to gender identity, gender expression/presentation, and sex assigned at birth.
- Emotionally Attracted To: Romantic/emotional orientation. It is important to note that sexual and romantic/emotional attraction can be from a variety of factors including but not limited to gender identity, gender expression/presentation, and sex assigned at birth. There are other types of attraction related to gender such as aesthetical or platonic. These are simply two common forms of attraction.

Answering Questions with confidence

Although we want to ensure what we say is clear, accurate, inclusive and age- and developmentally appropriate – which generally means less detailed information is better. The most important thing is to remember for us as educators is that all questions are important, to remove any shame/stigma/taboo when talking relationships, sexuality and puberty.

In primary age, most questions usually relate to:

- Puberty
- Reproductive body parts and functions
- What is normal?
- The real story about sex

Extra things to know about people doing sexy things ...

- It's for people who are grown up in their body and mind.
- There always has to be CONSENT.
- Sex doesn't always make a baby.
- Sex happens in a private place.
- Sex isn't for people in the same family unless they are the grown-up consenting couple.
 - Any sexy things should make those people feel good about themselves & each other.

Here's how I would respond to the student questions below. Feel free to take and use what you need or get some ideas and come up with some other responses that you feel may work better for your students.

Frequently Asked Student Questions

- Is it ok to masturbate every day?

Masturbation is when a person touches their own body for their own sexual pleasure. For a male person it might mean touching around the penis and scrotum. For a female person it might mean touching around the vulva, clitoris or breasts. Although, it's not a bad thing to do every day, the purpose of masturbation is to help a person to feel good about themselves in a sexy way and should only happen in a private place.

However, there are also many other things you can do that can make you feel good about yourself, that is not sexy, like (give examples of fun things they might like to do instead of masturbating).

Amaze.org video: Masturbation: Totally normal

- What is a vibrator?

A vibrator is a device that some people may use when they are having sexy times, either by themselves or with another person.

- What is a good time to start having sex? / How long do you have to have sex for?

It's for people who are grown up in their body and mind in a private place. And should only happen if those grown-up people want to give consent and any sexy things should make those people feel good about themselves. It's important to remember that sex isn't for people in the same family unless they are the grown-up consenting couple.

- What is porn?

Pornography is pictures or videos about sex. Some grown-ups like to look at pictures of people having sex, but these pictures are made for group ups not children and tweens and teens. Sometimes pornography shows people acting weirdly and hurting each other, and that's not good for children, teens or grown-ups to see. Pornography isn't like sex in real life. Pornography can show people doing things they don't really like doing, but they pretend to because they are acting and getting paid to do so.

It is important to remember that pornography is for grown up people. So, if you see porn or if someone shows you porn, it may make you feel weird and uncomfortable, people tell one of your trusted adults what has happened. You won't get in trouble, but we just need to know so we can talk about what you saw and anything that makes you feel worried, scared or uncomfortable and so it doesn't happen again for you.

- Someone I know has condoms, is it ok?

If the person is grown up in their body and mind, absolutely this is ok, as they may choose to use a condom if they don't want to make a baby. If they are not grown up in their mind and body, perhaps you could talk to a trusted adult (network of help hand activity) to let them know.

- Is it ok if I want big boobs?

Puberty is a time where our bodies are growing from our child body into an adult body. All of these changes happen at different ages and stages for young people, and bodies are all different and unique. One of the changes that happens is developing breasts. Some people might be concerned that their breasts are not growing like their friends' breasts. There are people who may be the first of their friends to start growing breasts, while others may be the very last of their friends.

Either way, a person might feel awkward or self-conscious if they are concerned their breasts are too big or too small. But here is what you have to remember: having bigger breasts doesn't make you more beautiful or sexy. It's all about who you are as a person that makes you attractive. Whether you have big breasts, little breasts or no breasts at all, you are uniquely and wonderfully made just the way you are.

- How do I get a girlfriend/boyfriend?

Communication is key. Good communication is not only about expressing yourself but also actively listening and working to understand what the other person is saying. If there is someone you think you may have a crush on, start a conversation with them, get to know them, ask them questions, see if you have common interests and like similar things. Perhaps ask them if they would like to hang out after school or on the weekend and do something fun together. This will give you more opportunity to spend time together and get to know them before asking the question if they would like to be your partner?

And if they say yes, great, happy days!

And if they say no, that's ok too. Even though rejection can be hurtful, it's important to remember that there is nothing wrong with you. What is most important is how you deal with it.

It can feel really upsetting to be rejected. What can you do when you feel hurt or angry about rejection? Even though you're upset, respect the other person's decision. You can also focus on yourself; talk with someone you trust about how you are feeling and do something fun to get your mind off things. And remember to keep being yourself. Just because one thing didn't work out like you planned, doesn't mean you can't take chances on other things in the future!

Children and Young People with Cognitive Disability

Sexual Health Victoria has developed a resource to provide educators working with students with cognitive disability with a comprehensive, age-, stage- and developmentally appropriate set of relationships and sexuality education resources. It acknowledges the right of students with cognitive disability to access information and to be supported to develop skills, so that they can make informed decisions about the relationships they engage in and their sexual and reproductive health throughout their lives.

Curriculum topics, include:

- Topic 1: Body Awareness
- Topic 2: Public and Private
- Topic 3: Feelings
- Topic 4: Identity
- Topic 5: Protective Behaviours
- Topic 6: Puberty
- Topic 7: Conception to birth
- Topic 8: Relationships
- Topic 9: Sexual decision-making

Educators and School Staff

Professional Development

Effective Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Educators:

- are open and honest
- are nonjudgmental, unbiased and don't moralise
- do not overshare personal information
- challenge sexist, homophobic, transphobic, offensive or threatening remarks and/or disruptive behaviour

Sexual Health Victoria.

Some content and or topics you may feel more knowledgeable and confident in teaching, whilst others may be new, unfamiliar and/or feel embarrassed to talk about in the classroom.

This is completely NORMAL.

Language is updating all of time and there are consistently new words or terms being introduced, particularly around gender, sexuality and relationships. Further, best practice and resources to teach this content are consistently being reviewed and updated.

A great tool developed by Sexual Health Victoria is the staff knowledge and confidence pre-survey.

This survey lists all the topics that are covered in comprehensive Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education curriculum and allows for staff to self-report their knowledge in each topic, as well as highlight their confidence level in teaching each topic. Completing this survey gives educators and leadership an overall idea of where you are currently at, and work out what you know and what you would like more information about.

The BCH Health Promoting Schools Team can meet with you and your staff (either face to face, or via phone or online) and discuss each point, where to find information and help develop the confidence to teach the curriculum (many schools often find this very helpful). Contact the BCH Health Promoting Schools Team for more information.

Women's Health Grampians – Communities of Respect and Equality (CoRE) Alliance is a partnership of organisations, businesses, clubs, schools and groups who share a vision for safe, equal and respectful communities in the Grampians region. Families and Carers

How to have the 'puberty or consent or sex' talk

We know most parents, families and carers find it difficult to have conversations about relationships and sexuality with the young people in their lives. Yet, children and young people are often full of curiosity and ask many questions.

Families and carers can be so worried about having to give a perfect age- and stage-appropriate answer that they end up saying nothing at all or leave the child/young person feeling more confused than before.

Although it is the school's responsibility to teach a comprehensive curriculum, it is a shared responsibility between the student, their parents/caregivers, the school and community organisations, such as Ballarat Community Health.

Families and carers are encouraged to continue Relationships and Sexuality (including Puberty) Education at home, to include family values, morals, traditions, and customs.

Ideally children learn early that they can talk to their parents and trusted carers and ask questions.

The home environment is often the first place for a child to learn about feeling safe, close and connected. Home life provides opportunities for lots of 'teachable moments'. Enjoying bath time, learning when it's OK to be nude, learning how to take care of their body and asking questions about going to the toilet are situations where education about accepting our body begins. As children get older, reactions to puberty, questions about sex or the arrival of first love and romantic partners will continue the 'home schooling' Western Australia Department of Health.

So, what is the best way to answer these very important questions?

Simple answers that are direct, straight to the point. This encourages further conversation if the child/young person wants to. It also allows the child/young person to stop and leave the conversation. Thirdly, this strategy allows for the conversation to be brought up at a later date if/when the child/person is ready and has more questions!

Talking a little and often makes a positive difference to your child's sexual health. It is these conversations that lay the foundations for well adjusted, confident and healthy children and young people who go on to experience positive, respectful relationships.

In response to advice that parents needed support in their role as the primary relationships and sexuality educators of their children and young people, the Western Australia Department of Health has developed two resources:

- Talk soon. Talk often: A guide for parents talking to their kids about sex

This free resource has been developed to help parents initiate regular and relaxed conversations with their children about relationships and sexuality education.

- age and stage guidance for parents of children 0 to 18 years
- how to answer tricky questions on topics such as how babies are made, puberty, sexting, contraception and sex conversations starters
- key messages on preparing your teen for healthy sexually active lives, consent, contraception and sexually transmissible infections
- references to services and reliable websites and books.

- Yarning quiet ways

Yarning quiet ways is based on the Talk soon. Talk often. book and was developed in consultation with Aboriginal families. It gives tips to parents of young Aboriginal people to help make yarning about sex and relationships a little easier.

- For Parents and Carers - Sexual Health Victoria has compiled this helpful Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) cheat sheet in plain language to guide parents and carers through the basics of what a young person should know and understand about sex and relationships.

- Puberty overview

- Talking to Children with Cognitive Disabilities – Sexual Health Victoria

Sexuality education needs to suit your child's level of understanding.

Resources such as books, stories, DVDs, anatomically correct dolls and three-dimensional models can help your child to understand.

All people, including those with cognitive disabilities (including intellectual disability, autism spectrum disorder and acquired brain injury), have the right to explore and express their sexuality in appropriate ways. Everyone needs ongoing and age-appropriate sexuality education to develop positive attitudes about their sexuality.

Easy English Factsheets - With Illustrations

The BCH Health Promoting Schools Team are more than happy to provide additional support for families and carers to start and continue the positive relationships, sex and consent conversations at home; whilst also assisting families and carers to answer any tricky questions their child or young person may have. Families and carers can contact the BCH Health Promoting Schools Team for more information.

Examples of common 'puberty' conversations

Menstruation/Periods

Talking openly about periods with your young person and making them a normal part of life will help them get the information they need to manage their period when it starts and manage their reproductive health into their future.

When discussing menstruation and periods, it is a great opportunity to show your child or young person the different types of products and explain how they are used to manage and absorb bleeding. These products include pads, tampons, a menstrual cup or period underwear. Each come in different shapes and sizes, but ALL need to be changed every 4-6 hours to stop leakage and in some cases prevent infection.

Before your child gets their first period, it's a good idea to show your child:

- what pads, period-proof underpants, tampons and cups look like
- how to use pads, period-proof underpants, tampons and cups
- how to dispose of pads and tampons, or rinse period-proof underpants
- how to clean a menstrual cup.

You might want to suggest your child carries pads, underpants, tampons or a cup. For example, they could keep some in a small bag in their school bag and sports bag.

[For more information, please visit \[Raising Children's Network – Periods & Hygiene\]\(#\)](#)

Erections and Wet Dreams

First, acknowledge that your young person might be curious and find out what they already know. For example, if your young person asks you what an erection is, you could ask, 'What do you think it is?' or 'What have you heard about that?'

Second, give your young person the facts and correct any misinformation. For example, 'A penis is usually soft. An erection is when it gets hard or stands up straight'.

Third, use the conversation as an opportunity to talk about your own thoughts and feelings. For example, 'You might get an erection when you're asleep and have a wet dream. This is when semen comes out of your penis. It's a natural part of growing up. You can't control wet dreams, so don't worry if it happens. We'll just wash your sheets'.

For more information, please visit Raising Children's Network – Sex education and talking with children about sex: 9-11 years.

Masturbation

When a child or young person is beginning puberty, they might masturbate, some more often than others. Masturbation is healthy if your young person is doing it privately without feelings of guilt and shame, and it isn't affecting their other activities and/or relationships.

You could start a conversation with a young person by saying, 'Did you know that some young people your age masturbate? That means touching your own genitals in a way that feels nice. Masturbating is a private activity that some people choose to do. Have you heard anything about masturbation?'

This can help your child feel good about themselves and let them know that you're comfortable talking about things like this.

For more information, please visit Raising Children's Network – Sex education and talking with children about sex: 9-11 years.

Why do people have sex?

If your young person is curious about why people have sex, you could say, 'Sex is one way that babies are made'. This question is also a great opportunity to share your thoughts about sex. For example, 'Grown Ups/Adults like sex because it can be a pleasurable thing to do in private when you're in a healthy relationship'.

If your young person asks about your sexual activity and you don't want to share that information, it's OK to say, 'That's private. But I'm happy to talk about sex more generally'.

If your young person asks you when you first had sex, they might be trying to work out the 'right' age to start having sex. You can answer more generally by saying, 'Sex is a private activity for people who are old enough and know that they're ready. The right age to start having sex is different for different people. When do you think might be the right age for someone?'

Sometimes children don't ask what they really want to know. You can work out what your child is really asking by turning the question around and saying, 'That's an interesting question. What made you think of that?'

[For more information, please visit \[Raising Children's Network – Sex education and talking with children about sex: 9-11 years.\]\(#\)](#)

Pornography

Pornography is sexually explicit material that aims to arouse people who are looking at it. For children aged 9-11 years, pornography can be confusing and upsetting.

Most pornography sends negative messages about relationships and gender. For example:

- Mutual consent and safe sex aren't important.
- Violent sexual acts are normal and appealing.
- Loving relationships aren't important.
- Aggressive behaviour towards women is normal and OK.
- Sexual relationships in which women have no power are normal and OK.

A lot of easily accessible pornography sends messages that can negatively affect children and teenagers. Looking at it regularly can influence their attitudes to sex and sexual relationships. This can affect their ability to form healthy, consensual and respectful relationships.

Here's how to explain pornography in a way your child can understand:

'Pornography is pictures or videos about sex. Some adults like to look at pictures of people having sex, but these pictures are made for adults not children. Sometimes pornography shows people acting weirdly and hurting each other, and that's not good for children or adults to see. Pornography isn't like sex in real life. Pornography can show people doing things they don't really like doing, but they pretend because they're paid.'

It is important to remember that pornography is for adults and grown up people. So, if you see porn or if someone shows you porn, it may make you feel weird and uncomfortable, people tell one of your trusted adults what has happened. You won't get in trouble, but we just need to know so we can talk about what you saw and anything that makes you feel worried, scared or uncomfortable and so it doesn't happen again for you.
